The Difference Between Reproductions and Originals

While both are visual representations of the same artwork, there are key differences:

- Original Artwork: An authentic piece created by the artist, often housed in museums or private collections, and usually protected by conservation standards.
- Reproduction: A copy or replica, which can be created through various methods, including printing, painting, or digital means, often produced in different sizes.

Understanding these distinctions helps collectors appreciate the value and limitations of reproductions.
